Jobs on the Farm

There are farms all over the world.

Farmers grow food for people to eat.

Jobs on the Farm

Some farms have animals, like cows, chickens, goats and sheep.

Some farms grow crops, like vegetables or wheat.

There are lots of jobs to do on any farm.

Feeding the Animals

The animals need to be fed every day.

Chickens are fed grain, seeds and corn.

Cows are fed hay, grain and soy. Some cows eat grass, too.

Keeping the Animals Clean

The animals' stables and pens must be kept clean.

Dirty straw is removed. Fresh straw keeps the animals warm and dry.

Looking After the Babies

Lots of baby animals are born on farms each year.

Looking After the Babies

The farmers look after the baby animals to keep them healthy and make sure they grow.

It is important that they have enough food and water.

Milking the Cows

Cows need to be milked every day.

Milking the Cows

The milk is taken to be cleaned and then put into bottles.

It is then sold in shops.

Collecting the Eggs

Most chickens lay eggs every day.

Collecting the Eggs

The eggs are collected.

They are sorted into egg boxes for customers to buy.

Herding the Sheep

Sheep graze on grass in the fields.

When a farmer needs to move the sheep, they might use a sheepdog to help.

Shearing the Sheep

In the summer, farmers remove the woolly coats from the sheep.

The wool is cleaned and turned into jumpers and other clothes.

Planting the Crops

Some farms grow plants to eat, like fruit, vegetables or wheat.

The farmer plants lots of seeds in spring.

Soon, the crops start to grow.

Growing the Crops

The farmer looks after the crops as they grow.

They water the crops.

In time, the crops will be ready to harvest.

Harvesting the Crops

When the crops are ready, the farmer harvests them with their hands or with a machine.

Harvesting the Crops

The food is collected and cleaned.

It is then taken to shops or markets and sold.
